Mexican bungee jumping

Two New Zealanders were bungee-jumping one day.

The first said to his mate, "You know, we could make a lot of money running our own bungee-jumping service in Mexico"

The second Kiwi thinks this is a great idea, so the two pooled their money to buy everything they needed: a tower, an elastic cord, insurance.

They travelled to a small town in Mexico and began to set up their tower in the square. Local people came out to watch them at work. When the tower was complete, the two mates climbed to the top to begin testing prior to opening for business. By this time there was a large, exuberant and expectant crowd.

The first Kiwi jumped. He bounced at the end of the cord. As he came back up, his friend noticed that he had a few cuts and scratches. Unfortunately, he was unable to catch him and he fell again.

The second time he bounced back, he was bruised and bleeding. Again, his mate missed him.

He managed to recover him on the third return. By this time the tester has a some broken bones and is almost unconscious.

The first Kiwi was most concerned, "What happened bro? Was the cord too long?"

"No the cord was fine," gasped his mate, "but what the **** is a piñata?"
