A VERY GOOD EXAMPLE OF MISCOMMUNICATION!

A young husband comes home one night, and his wife throws

her arms around his neck:

"Darling, I have great news. I'm a month overdue. I think we're going to have a baby! The doctor gave me a test today, but until we find out for sure, we can't tell anybody."

Because the young couple hasn't paid their last bill electric bill, the next day, a guy from the electric company rings the door-bell:

"Are you Mrs. Smith?"

She says yes and the guy continues saying:

"You're a month overdue, you know!"

"How do YOU know?" stammers the young woman.

"Well, ma'am, it's in our files!" says the man from the electric company.

"What are you saying? It's in your files?????"

"Absolutely."

"Well, let me talk to my husband about this tonight."

That night, she tells her husband about the visit, and he becomes as mad as a bull, rushes to the electric company offices the first thing the next morning and demands:

"What's going on here? You have it on file that my wife is a month overdue? What business is that of yours?" the husband shouts.

"Just calm down," says the clerk,

"it's nothing serious. All you have to do is pay us."

"PAY you? And if I refuse?"

"Well, in that case, sir, we'd have no option but to cut yours off."

"And what would my wife do then?" the husband asks.

Grinning like an opossum eating you know what, the clerk says:

"I don't know. I guess she'd just have to use a candle."
